SHRIMP SEASON BEGINS: Boats for traditional Hokkai shrimp fishing sail in Notsuke Bay off Betsukai in Hokkaido, northern Japan, on June 26, the first day of the shrimp fishing season.

DEATH ON MT FUJI: The bodies of three people were found near the crater of Mt. Fuji in central Japan during search efforts, police said Wednesday. The three bodies were in the inner area of the crater of the 12,388-foot mountain, located away from each other. A mountain rescue team discovered the three individuals, showing no vital signs, when searching for a man in his 50s from Tokyo, who went missing after going to climb the mountain on Friday night. His family made an emergency call at around 6 a.m. Sunday. All three bodies were found on the Shizuoka Prefecture side of the mountain, which also straddles Yamanashi Prefecture. Designated a UNESCO World Cultural Heritage site in 2013, Japan's highest peak is a popular tourist destination.

SUITCASE RIDER BUSTED: Japanese police on Wednesday stressed to the public that riders of electric motorized suitcases must have a driver's license after a Chinese woman became the first person to be referred to prosecutors for unlicensed riding. The three-wheeled suitcase the woman used can travel at a maximum speed of 8 miles per hour, the police said, adding that in Japan such vehicles are classified the same as mopeds with engine displacements of 50 cc or less. The woman in her 30s who studies in Japan was referred to prosecutors on Tuesday after she allegedly rode her suitcase on a sidewalk in Osaka on March 31, the police said.

HOMELESSNESS INITIATIVE: The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday will consider placing on the November ballot an initiative that would repeal the county's quarter-cent sales tax for homelessness-prevention measures and replace it with an indefinite half-cent sales tax to be used for the same purpose. The county Registrar-Recorder/County Clerk's Office announced last week that backers of the Affordable Housing, Homelessness Solutions and Prevention Now measure had collected enough valid signatures to get the initiative on the ballot.

GOLF TEE TIMES: On the heels of the Los Angeles City Council's effort to crack down on brokering of tee-time reservations at municipal golf courses, the county Board of Supervisors took similar steps Tuesday by requiring non-refundable reservation deposits and charging cancellation fees. Under the motion introduced by Supervisor Lindsey Horvath, the county will require a non-refundable reservation fee of $10 per player. Reservations that are canceled within 48 hours of the tee time — or if the players fail to show up — will be subject to forfeiture of the reservation fee along with another charge of $10 per player, with the proceeds funding the county's Junior Golf Program.

King Charles Welcomes Japan's Imperial Couple at Start of State Visit

Emperor Naruhito praises Japan-U.K. friendship as couple makes second overseas goodwill trip.

KYODO NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — Japan's Emperor Naruhito and Empress Masako started a three-day state visit to Britain on Tuesday as King Charles and Queen Camilla welcomed them with an array of ceremonies and a state banquet at Buckingham Palace.

It marked the Japanese couple's second goodwill overseas trip since Emperor Naruhito ascended the throne in May 2019. Initial plans for the visit in 2020 were canceled due to the coronavirus pandemic.

At the start of his speech at an evening banquet, the king addressed the emperor, who had studied in the country and last visited in 2022, saying in Japanese, "Welcome back to Britain."

"At the core of our partnership is a close friendship, one based on mutual understanding of the importance of international rules and global institutions forged from the lessons of history, including its darkest years," he said before some 170 people in attendance.

In his speech, the emperor expressed his admiration for the late Queen Elizabeth and said he was "privileged" to have enjoyed the "very warm company" of Britain's royal family during his studies in the country.

"It is my sincere hope that both Japan and the U.K., as friends like no other, will continue to make untiring efforts for true mutual understanding through exchanges of their people, thereby building an enduring relationship based on friendship, goodwill and cooperation," the emperor said.

He also referred to the "sad period" in which bilateral ties were strained by World War II, saying he was struck by "profound feelings as I extend my thoughts to what was in the minds of my grandfather, the Emperor Showa, and subsequently, my father, the Emperor Emeritus, as they set foot in this country after times of great difficulty."

Emperor Hirohito, posthumously known as Emperor Showa, visited Britain in 1971, while Emperor Akihito did so in 1998. During the latter visit, former prisoners of war turned their backs on his carriage in a protest.

Turning to the future, Emperor Naruhito said, "We can say that we are fortunate to have been given the opportunity to climb even higher on this grand, broad-based mountain, guided by the path trodden by our forebears."

It was announced on Tuesday that King Charles has been presented with Japan's highest honor, the Collar of the Supreme Order of the Chrysanthemum. In return, the emperor was appointed to the Most Noble Order of the Garter, Britain's highest order of chivalry.

The official state visit began earlier Tuesday for the couple, who arrived on Saturday. Prince William, first in line to the British throne, greeted them at their central London hotel before traveling to the Horse Guards Parade for a ceremonial welcome accompanied by a 41-gun salute.

Alongside the royal family, the imperial couple exchanged greetings with Prime Minister Rishi Sunak, as well as Foreign Secretary David Cameron and Home Secretary James Cleverly.

King Charles, who was diagnosed with cancer in February, and the emperor inspected a guard of honor, formed of the 1st Battalion Welsh Guards with the Band of the Japanese national anthem "Kimigayo" and the traditional folk song "Sakura Sakura" (cherry blossoms) during the inspection.

The royal party then traveled up the Mall in horse-drawn carriages

Gardena Police Announce Record Illegal Fireworks Seizure

An image shows pallets of illegal fireworks confiscated by the Gardena Police Department last Friday.

RAFU STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

The Gardena Police Department announced on Wednesday it has made the largest single seizure of illegal fireworks in recent California history, over 75 tons, more than doubling the previous record of 32 tons seized in a South Los Angeles warehouse in 2021.

Special Investigations Unit personnel responded to a commercial warehouse in the 17000 block of Vermont Avenue, near 170th Street, on Friday, where they discovered the fireworks, which have an estimated street value of approximately $7 million to $10 million, Gardena Police Department Lt. David Brock said.

Public Information Officer Lt. Christopher Cuff said that Gardena PD worked in conjunction with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, Cal Fire's Office of the State Fire Marshal Arson and Bomb Unit, Hawthorne Police Department and San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department. The fireworks were originally from China and have been taken to a safe location.

Investigators identified the three suspects connected to the illegal fireworks discovery as 44-year-old Alejandro Rodriguez of Wilmington, 30-year-old Natalie Navarro of Carson, and 25-year-old Daniel Gudino of Wilmington, who were all arrested and booked on suspicion of possession of explosives and other various weapons violation offenses.

The sale and use of Safe and Sane Fireworks is allowed in Gardena on July 4 between noon and 10 p.m., but Cuff stressed that the city has "zero tolerance" for illegal fireworks.

"In the city of Gardena, abide by the law. When you celebrate the Fourth of July, celebrate safely," Cuff said.

Anyone with information related to the seizure of fireworks was urged to call Gardena Police Department Special Investigation Unit Detective Joe Martinez at (310) 217-6193.

World Premiere of 'Unbroken Blossoms' at East West Players

East West Players presents the world premiere of "Unbroken Blossoms" by Philip W. Chung, directed by Jeff Liu, from June 27 to July 21 at the David Henry Hwang Theater, 120 N. Judge John Aiso St. in Little Tokyo.

An idealistic family man and a cynical, aspiring filmmaker are hired as the Chinese American consultants for "Broken Blossoms," Hollywood's first onscreen interracial love story... between a white actress and a white actor in yellowface makeup. If the circumstances weren't already questionable enough, the consultants must contend with the outsized ego of the film's director, D.W. Griffith, who is attempting to belie criticisms of racism after the release of his controversial film "The Birth of a Nation."

Chung's play is a historical reimagining of the making of a boundary-breaking Hollywood classic that shines a light on the collateral damage in the search for "authentic" representation, and asks what price we pay for our art.

U.S. Serviceman in Okinawa Indicted for Sexual Assault of Minor

NAHA — Naha prosecutors have indicted a U.S. Air Force member in Okinawa Prefecture for allegedly sexually assaulting and kidnapping a girl under the age of 16 in December, local authorities said Tuesday, with this latest incident involving military personnel likely to further inflame local opposition to their presence.

According to the indictment dated March 27, Brennon Washington, 25, invited the girl to speak to him in his car at a park in Yomitan on Dec. 24 and drove her to his residence before committing indecent acts such as touching the lower half of the girl's body with the knowledge that she was under 16.

The Japanese Foreign Ministry became aware of the indictment on March 27 and lodged a complaint with U.S. Ambassador to Japan Rahm Emanuel, but it did not inform the Okinawa prefectural government until an inquiry was made on Tuesday, Okinawa Gov. Denny Tamaki said.

Tamaki said the development "brought a significant level of distrust" to relations and described the allegations as "not just disturbing to prefectural residents but also a violation of the girl's dignity."

The girl is Japanese and resides in the southern Japan prefecture, a government source said. She was between 13 and 15 years old at the time of the incident, an investigative source said.

A person known to the girl reported the incident on the day it occurred, police said. Washington and the girl did not know each other, and he does not reside on U.S. military base property, the police said.

Prosecutors have not disclosed Washington's response to the allegations.

The case's first hearing is set for July 12 at the Naha District Court.

Okinawa continues to host the majority of U.S. military facilities in Japan, almost 80 years after the country's defeat in World War II. Crimes committed by U.S. servicemen and non-military personnel have been a constant source of grievance for locals.

The rape of a 12-year-old Okinawa schoolgirl by three U.S. servicemen in 1995 prompted a wave of public outrage. Other cases include the rape and murder of a 20-year-old woman in 2016 by a former U.S. base worker who was later sentenced to life in prison.

End of a Cherished Era in Sawtelle

With three generations of dedication and labor, the family-run F.K. Nursery closes after 88 years.

By CHRIS KOMAI

As the Kageyama family prepared for the closing of F.K. Nursery in the Sawtelle area of West Los Angeles on June 28, Eric, the youngest of the Sansei siblings who have run the business inherited from their Nisei parents and uncle, which was started by their Issei grandparents in 1936, acknowledged the finality of the family's decision to close.

"It was time," Eric explained. Like so many of the Japanese American multi-generational family businesses that persevered through overt racial discrimination, World War II, resettlement and the ups and downs of changing times, F.K. Nursery had gotten through 88 years through hard work, sacrifice, and the dedication of the family and the nursery's workers. There also was the loyalty of their customers, some for as long as 40 years, and the support for each generation from family and friends when things were hardest.

According to Eric, today's economic forces and regulations on top of the recent COVID-19 pandemic made it clear that the nursery's closing was unavoidable. Eric revealed some community members tried to encourage them to continue, but the truth is that only those who have worked a family business every day, year after year, can appreciate the current challenges and the family's final choice.

"The decision (to close the business) came during the holidays," Eric said. "We've been thinking about it for a while. My brother (Ron) is almost 70. My sister Julie is almost 60. It was a tough decision. We felt a responsibility to our workers. Some have been working for 30 years."

That includes five office workers and 11 who did the manual labor. But to add perspective, in 2003, F.K. Nursery had 30 workers. Since then, eldest son Mark left the business 10 years ago and sister Diane passed away. Ultimately, the numbers don't lie.

F.K. Nursery is neither a retail nursery selling plants, hoses and insecticide to walk-up customers nor a wholesaler that grows plants to sell to other nurseries.

"We only sell to the landscapers," Eric noted. "We fill special orders.

Kuniye and Kumaichi Kageyama established F.K. Nursery in 1936 in the Sawtelle neighborhood of Los Angeles. After surviving a world war, racial discrimination, incarceration and the inevitable highs and lows of the local economy, the legacy business will wrap up its operations this week.

We're brokers who help landscapers find the plants they want from the wholesalers. We do have things in stock, but we have to order them. My brother Ron said we're sort like the 7-11 of nurseries."

As with so many stories of family businesses in the Japanese American community, it begins with the Issei Kumaichi and Kuniye Kageyama, immigrants from Sakai Minato, Tottori-ken. Upon their arrival, Kumaichi was able to find work as a gardener, while Kuniye worked at another nursery to learn the trade. They scraped together enough money to start a small nursery in the Sawtelle neighborhood, which in the 1930s was composed of small farms growing lima beans.

Kumaichi had adopted the first name of Fred and so F.K. Nursery was born. The Kageyamas had four children: Ruby, Hiroshi, Akira and Hideo, all of whom eventually worked at the nursery.

Ambitious enough to want to expand their footprint for the nursery, the Kageyamas were able to Eric Kageyama, the third-generation owner of F.K. Nursery, said it was a family decision to finally close the business.

Photos by MARK KURODA purchase neighboring plots under the names of their American friends to circumvent the Alien Land Laws. This proved fortuitous; when World War II began and all people of Japanese ancestry were unlawfully removed from their homes by the U.S. government, the Kageyamas' property remained secure.

The family situation was awful for the Kageyamas. Kumaichi was picked up by the FBI because of his role as the manager of the local community center's kendo club while Kuniye was hospitalized for months. With older sister Ruby stuck in Japan, the three brothers were sent to Manzanar under the care of family friends Isamu and Shizue Ikebuchi. The family was reunited when Kuniye recovered and Kumaichi was released from the Santa Fe, N.M. camp in 1943.

When the war ended, the Kageyamas still had their property and restarted the nursery in 1945. Eventually, they were able to purchase a house adjacent to their property at 2027 Colby Ave., which became their home and the nursery's headquarters. When the oldest son Hiro turned 21, the property was transferred into his name.

After both Hiro and Aki completed their military service, they used what is known as "mustering out" pay (about $300 each) to purchase the nursery's first truck. Ruby and her husband Nobuyuki Ueda along with younger brother Hideo had been maintaining the business with their parents, but with his older brothers' return, Hideo went on to become one of the first Japanese American orthopedic surgeons in Los Angeles.

Again, the family invested in the business, buying nearby land and going into debt. Facing stiff competition, they decided to become a wholesale supplier of plants to gardeners and landscapers, its current business. This while Hiro married his wife Betty (Uemura) and started their family.

Hiro and Aki took over the business as their parents eventually passed away. Everyone had to scrimp and Aki even stopped taking a paycheck to help make ends meet. He also sacrificed going to college so that his brothers could get their degrees. But eventually the tide turned and the business began to grow. With a little prosperity, F.K. Nursery supported the local community, enough that the brothers were recognized at the West Los Angeles Community Service luncheon in 1996.

By the 1990s, the Hiro Kageyama children had all worked at the nursery, but all still went to college. Brother David became an optometrist out of college. The Sansei generation helped to develop F.K. Nursery, remodeling the shack that had been the business office for decades and bringing in computers to speed up processing. It also began to rely on growers throughout California and beyond to acquire the plants their clients requested. That is how the business has operated until today.

Eric said the family's plan is to sell off the property. As the youngest at 52, Eric has already figured out his next occupation: basketball coach at West Torrance High. He grew up playing for the Tigers Youth Club in the JA community leagues. His father was delighted to sponsor one of the last dominating Lakers AA basketball teams in the Southern California Nisei Athletic Union.

"My dad was proud of the nursery's relationship to the team, which scrimmaged against the U.S. Women's Basketball to prepare for the 1984 Los Angeles Olympic Games," Eric recalled.

After the family decided to close the business, Eric, whose daughter Shay played basketball at West Torrance High, became aware of a coaching opening and applied. "I'm ready," he stated. "I'm sad, but I'm excited. It was my choice to stay at the nursery, but now this has happened."

To close out the business on the last day, the family decided to keep it small. "Just the family and the workers," Eric revealed. "Maybe get a taco truck."

Originally, that included Betty and Aki, but sadly, one week before the business is scheduled to close, Uncle Aki passed away at 91 years of age. "It was very hard for him to process the thought of us closing after devoting his life to it," Eric shared. "He would keep saying, 'Mama and Papa worked so hard.' We all wondered if the heartbreak of closing would be the end, but I never imagined it would happen the week of."

It is one of the sadder aspects of family businesses closing. Japanese American legacy businesses have unfortunately continued to close and that will not change. But the Kageyamas fortunately created a booklet in 2003 based on their family history, so the sacrifices by their family members, including by Aki, will not be forgotten. And the story of F.K. Nursery will live on.

From left: Eric's father, Hiro, his uncle, Aki and Kumaichi. Aki gave up school so that his brothers could earn their college degrees.

Having been sitting undisturbed at the nursery for decades, this traveling trunk is one of several the family brought back from Manzanar. It contains a trove of Japanese books and other items.

June 20, 1941 – June 10, 2024

Helen Masaye Kataoka Nakamoto, age 82, of San Jose, Calif., passed from this life on June 10, 2024. She was born on June 20, 1941, to Tom and Alice Kataoka in Los Angeles, Calif. Predeceased by brothers, Pete (Ichiko) and Jerry; sister, Ethel (Ivan) Okazaki. She married Richard Nakamoto in 1959 and together they raised their family in San Jose, Calif.

She is survived by her husband of 65 years, Richard Nakamoto; sons, Paul and Jeff; daughter, Cheryl Davis (Mark); granddaughter, Katie Davis; niece, Terri Okazaki and a host of many family members, friends and her dog, Peanut.

Helen worked in the insurance industry for 25 years with the California State Automobile Association and Industrial Indemnity Insurance Company.

She will be remembered for her determination and sense of humor. A dedicated mom, she served as a girls' softball manager and coach for the Blossom Ridge Bobby Sox Softball League, Cub Scout den mother in Saratoga and many other school and extracurricular activities with her children.

One of Helen's favorite activities was bowling, where she and Richard participated in many leagues for decades. Her other favorite activity was playing the slot machine and she was often very lucky with the one-armed-bandit. You never needed to ask her more than once, would you like to make a trip to South Lake Tahoe, Reno or Las Vegas. She said that she'd like to be remembered for not being afraid to try new things, water skiing in the ocean, snow skiing in South Lake Tahoe, snowmobiling, hiking to the top of Nevada and Vernal Falls in Yosemite National Park and whitewater rafting.

Service Information: Graveside and burial, Oak Hill Memorial Park - San Jose on Saturday, July 6, at 11 a.m., lunch to follow.

Michiko Terajima

Michiko Terajima was born on February 18, 1923, in Phoenix, Ariz., and passed away on June 6, 2024, in her residence in Mission Viejo, Calif.

Predeceased by parents, Torahai and Shizu (Yamashita) Iseri; siblings, Shig, Harry, George, Toshiko Mori, Yoshiko Honda and Tayeko Polk; 1 nephew and 3 nieces. She is survived by an extended family spread across the U.S.

She began public school, Japanese school and training in classical Japanese dance at an early age while living in Gardena. She eventually began teaching classes in Japanese dance. She also expanded her dance repertoire by learning other ethnic Asian dance forms.

When Executive Order 9066 was issued, the family was first moved to Pomona Assembly Center, then on to Heart Mountain Relocation Center, Wyoming. She was asked to begin teaching Japanese dance in camp and was part of a group that was instrumental in putting together a dance group that performed dance and kabuki shows.

She received a sponsorship from Teiko Ono's dance group that allowed her to leave Heart Mountain, and after years of performing and teaching Asian ethnic dance classes in New York, she was approached by Jerome Robbins about working on a soon to be released Broadway show. Seems that many of the better dancers that auditioned were taught by Michiko. The show turned out to be "The King and I." The number "Getting to Know You" was written for her by Richard Rodgers. After Broadway she toured the world with the show, then came to Hollywood to work on the film. Michiko was one of the first Japanese Americans to be credited for her work on Broadway and in the film. For many years she worked as administrator/senior consultant of the Margie Coate Sick & Relief Fund for the American Guild of Variety Artists (AGVA).

Services will be held at Koyasan Buddhist Temple for family and friends on Wednesday, July 3, 2024, 11 a.m. In lieu of koden, donations can be made in her name to: Entertainment Community Fund, <http://entertainmentcommunity.org>.
